decor style categories

Hi there! Using decor style categories, you can easily plan out your home decor without over buying and cluttering your home. Here is a list of different types of categories. It's perfectly okay to have different categories working together in the same room! A compilation of categories helps you find your style and make it unique. Plus, you can change up your categories in different rooms!

Color categories:

Start by choosing a color category. For example, in my living room, I am going for tan and blues. So in the stores, I'm looking for things that are blue, tan, or a mixture of both.

Choose 1 main color (typically a neutral color) and 1-3 accent colors. Below are some examples.

Tan with blue and green accents

White with gray accents

Gray with white accents

Black with brown accents

White with green and tan and black accents

Pink with white accents

Blue with black accents

Style categories:

It's necessary to choose an overall style for either your whole house or specific rooms. For example, I am going for a natural/rustic kind of look. So with my living room example, when I look for items, I'm looking for a natural and rustic look (not a modern look) with the blues and tans. Here are some examples:

Natural

Light and airy

Modern

Rustic

Antique

City living

Farmhouse

Accent Decor categories:

Accent pieces and accent decor will help make your color and style categories stand out. For example, with my natural/rustic kind of look, I love adding wood pieces (wall hangings, furniture, storage boxes, etc) where I can. The wood pieces help add the touches of tan/brown for my colors and the natural/rustic look for my style. Here are more examples:

Greenery

Metal

Wood

Glass

Themed categories:

A themed category is a little different from a style category in that it's more specific. If you're going for a specific them, you're probably not going for a general style.

Themed categories are used a lot for children's bedrooms or man caves. For example:

Sports

Animals

Cars

School room

Spend some time brainstorming what kind of colors, style or them, and accent decor you are wanting in the whole house or in a specific room. This really helps to map out what to keep an eye out for as you shop and decorate your house/room.
